Background

The Move Over Law was added to section 316.126, Florida Statutes, in 2002. The statute, which was originally introduced in 1971, requires motorists to move or yield right-of-way to emergency vehicles and, in 2014, utility and sanitation vehicles were added to the Move Over Law. The Move Over Law states that drivers must move over as soon as it is safe to do so for any authorized law enforcement, emergency or service vehicles displaying any visible signals while stopped on the roadside, including sanitation vehicles and tow trucks. When motorists cannot vacate the lane closest to the emergency or service vehicle, they must slow to a speed that is 20 miles per hour less than the posted speed limit. Failure to yield or move over puts law enforcement officers, emergency first responders and public service workers in danger while they are on the job protecting and serving the citizens and visitors of Florida.

Throughout the Move Over, Florida! month-long campaign, the Florida Department of Highway Safety and Motor Vehicles (FLHSMV) educated the public regarding the Move Over Law, including: overall awareness for the vulnerability of law enforcement and service providers to collision, the Move Over Law and what the law states and best practices on how to comply with the law. As a law enforcement agency, FLHSMV also focused on the safety of Florida Highway Patrol (FHP) members because state troopers are vulnerable to move over crashes, injuries and fatalities in the line of duty.
Data
The number of total crashes involving a failure to move over citation has decreased from 2016 to 2017. Crash data for move over will be underreported due to the fact that citations will usually be written for the most serious offense, when more than one offense has occurred. There were 19,146 citations written for Move Over violations in 2017, and from January to September 2018 there were 13,782 citations.

Target Market
